GOAL OF TRAINING

The Constitution of Kenya 2010 established a new order pursuant to which society must respond by relooking at the existing laws and policies and developing new legislative agenda to align with its dictates. Some laws are now obsolete; some require reform. County Governments have made a significant number of laws in the last ten years. Other laws need to be created by County Governments.

Much as the Constitution of Kenya 2010 provides that legislative authority in the County vests in the County Assembly [art. 185(1)], it also provides that “A county executive committee may prepare proposed legislation for consideration by the county assembly” [art. 183(2)] Often the County Executive makes policies and legislative proposals which may be debated and passed by the County Assembly. To do this, the two arms of County Government employs attorneys or lawyers and other professional to help in matters of policy and legislation. These officers not only participate in scrutiny of policies and legislation, but often draft these policies and laws.

This course seeks to build capacity of staff involved in legislative process in drafting of laws and regulations. It will address the question of designing public policy from which laws and regulations often flow.
